- The History of the RHS Chelsea Flower Show

May 20 1913 saw the First Show at Chelsea, known as the Great Spring Show. The First Shows were Three-Day Events held within a Single Marquee. Royal Visits were yet to become a Tradition – the King and Queen did not attend in 1913, but the King's Mother, Queen Alexandra, attended with Two of her Children. The Only Garden to win a Gold Medal before the War was also in 1913 and was awarded to a Rock Garden created by John Wood of Boston Spa.

While the Original Shows were housed within One Tent, the Provision of Tents increased after the War ended. In 1928, a Tent for Roses appeared and between 1920 and 1934, there was a Tent for Pictures, Scientific Exhibits and Displays of Garden Design. In the late 1920s, Two Residents of Chelsea, the Countess of Lovelace & Jacqueline Hope, held Tea Parties for Celebrities and Titled Guests to mark the Show.

The Chelsea Flower Show celebrated its 100th Birthday in May 2013. A Temporary Ban on Gnomes was lifted, with Well-Known Faces – including Elton John and Helen Mirren – painting Gnomes to sell for Charity. In total, 20 Gold Medals were given to Gardens in 2013, with a Non-British Firm taking 'Best in Show' for the First Time. The Chelsea Plant of the Year became the Chelsea Plant of the Centenary – with Geranium 'Rozanne' (introduced by Blooms of Bressingham) winning the Crown.

Today, RHS Chelsea Flower Show, sponsored by The Newt in Somerset, retains its Unrivalled Status as the Premier Event in Horticulture. For Garden and Landscape Designers and their Sponsors, Specialist Nurseries, Florists and Specialist Sellers it continues to be the World's most Prestigious Flower Show. In 2020, the Show went Digital for the First Time, delivering Inspirational Articles and Fun and Informative Videos created by Designers, Judges, Plant Experts and RHS Garden Advice.
